WEBINAR

Reasonable Suspicion Training Overview

January 3, 2018
1:00 – 2:00 p.m.

SPEAKER

Bruce Lawler
Contractors Risk Management
DOT Compliance & Training Specialist

The Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) requires that all persons designated to supervise drivers receive Reasonable Suspicion Training (RST). In this webinar, Bruce Lawler of Contractor's Risk Management (CRM) will provide background on the subject for owners, managers, and safety personnel. Not only is RST required by the FMCSA, but it is also an important legal safeguard when attempting to determine if an individual is intoxicated or under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

This webinar will not provide the formal 2 hour reasonable suspicion course, but rather provide a basic understanding of the topics and a sampling of the content provided. RST is available for contractors from CRM and many other safety consultants, but will now be more important than ever with the ongoing decriminalization and legalization of marijuana.

After completing this course, participants will be able to:

- Describe the regulations that apply to reasonable suspicion testing, including the alcohol and drug prohibitions
- Recognize the signs and symptoms of alcohol abuse and drug use and describe what to look for when determining reasonable suspicion

To learn more about these issues, please join us as we provide this information during the webinar on January 3, 2018 from 1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.
